Manslaughtery: How McKinsey Protected Sackler Family & Purdue Pharma, Enabling the Opioid Crisis and Destroying Records – Suggested Paying Distributors Per Overdose!!

tonyodarg.wordpress.com/2020/11/29/manslaughtery-mckinsey-purdue-opioid

Tony Odarg November 29, 2020

The New York Times dropped a bombshell report detailing the evil of the Jewish Sackler family, owners of Purdue Pharma, and how the consulting firm McKinsey enabled them. McKinsey not only suggested profiting off of opioid deaths, but also destroying records.

> “McKinsey laid out several options to shore up sales. One was to give Purdue’s distributors a rebate for every OxyContin overdose attributable to pills they sold.” As I said, “manslaughtery.” “A leader for McKinsey’s North American pharmaceutical practice, wrote to another senior partner…: ‘It probably makes sense to have a quick conversation with the risk committee to see if we should be doing anything’ other than ‘eliminating all our documents and emails.’” I reviewed the documents. They make this clear: “They knew what was going on. And they found a way to look past it, through it, around it, so as to answer the only questions they cared about: how to make the client money and, when the walls closed in, how to protect themselves.”

In other words, McKinsey suggested the Purdue pay off distributors for overdose deaths, thereby incentivizing opioid overprescription! There is something sinister about people who still defend a for-profit healthcare system. The profit motive does not incentivize good behavior, it actually does the opposite. We need Medicare for All now!

Links

Meme: https://twitter.com/GraduatedBen/status/1332523469783883776
Archive: https://archive.vn/3pRZA

Report: https://www.nytimes.com/2020/11/27/business/mckinsey-purdue-oxycontin-opioids.html
Archive: https://archive.vn/SBVuI

Thread: https://twitter.com/AnandWrites/status/1332458530666913795
Archive: https://archive.vn/RDRNB